ABSTRACT

A bibliography on academic advising in higher education is presented that contains 196 journal sources and 58 unpublished sources from 1960 through June 1983. The document is designed to assist both practitioners and researchers and includes many specific aspects of the process, including faculty advising, peer advising, computer-assisted advising, advisor training programs, advising centers, retention efforts, and evaluation instruments. The bibliography focuses on entries that are not already included in the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) system under the "academic advising" descriptor. (Author/SW)

Pomona, N. J.
(for the National Academic Advising Association)

This extensive bibliography of 196 journal sources and 58 unpublished sources has been compiled to assist both the practitioner and the researcher of the academic advising process in higher education. The entries include many specific aspects of this process, including faculty advising, peer advising, computer-assisted advising, advisor training programs, advising centers, retention efforts, and evaluation instruments. The reader must still consult the original source for complete details.

This bibliography spans the literature from c. 1960 through June 1983, and it includes only those entries which are not already included in the ERIC system under the "Academic Advising" descriptor. The user should search further under this descriptor for additional sources, which includes the NACADA Journal (of the National Academic Advising Association), the Proceedings of the National Conferences on Academic Advising, and other relevant sources that are routinely indexed in the ERIC system.
